DRAMA MONOLOGUE LEVEL A

In the Image
by Justin Street

A Monologue for young actors (age 6-11)

Actor stands and addresses the audience.

I am made in the image.

My hair could be short or long, or straight or curly.

It could be black, or brown, or blonde, or red, or white - or missing.

But it is beautiful, for I am made in the image.

I am made in the image.

My teeth could be straight, or crooked, they could have braces on them, or not.

They could be all mine, or made in a factory. They could be falling out because they're new, or falling out because they're old.

But they are beautiful, for I am made in the image.

I am made in the image.

My skin could be light, or it could be dark, or it could be one of the million shades between.

It could have freckles or it could have scars.

It could be wrinkled from being in the tub so long, or it could be wrinkled from being in the world so long.

But it is beautiful, for I am made in the image.

I am made in the image.

I could be tall, or I could be short. I could have a hard time sitting still, or have a hard time getting going.

I could be the fastest in my grade, or last one picked for games.

I could need wheels to help me go, or a cane, or a dog.

But my body is beautiful, and I am made in the image.

I am made in the image.

My eyes could be blue, or brown, or green, or hazel - or two different colors.

They could be sharp as an eagle, or they could need glasses, or maybe I see with my hands.

But look in my eyes and see me. And I look in your eyes and see you.

And you are beautiful, because you are made in the image too.

Made in the image - of God.
